COMMENTARIES, &c. ON THE REVELATION OF ST. JOHN.

See also under "Old and New Test.," col. 125. "New Test.," col. 745. "Daniel," col. 682.

The writers on the Apocalypse have been divided into three great classes:—

1. Those who assert that all, or nearly all, the prophecies contained in it have been already fulfilled in the catastrophes of the Jewish nation and the old Roman Empire, the early triumphs of Christianity, &c.—such as Alagar, Grotius, Hammond, Bossuet, Calmet, De Sacy, Eichhorn, Herder, Ewald, and most of the German writers; also Stuart, Dr. Davidson, Desprez, &c.
2. Those who make the whole, except the primary visions and letters to the seven churches, relate to things yet future, such as Ribera, S. R. Maitland, C. Maitland, Burgh Dr. J. H. Todd, B. Newton, &c.
3. Those who consider it as prefiguring in detail the chief events affecting the Church and Christendom, whether secular or ecclesiastical, from St. John's time to the

- Vol. 4 contains: Index capitulorum et numerus versuum. Interpretatio nominum propriorum. Index dictionum Latinarum.
- The expenses of this valuable work were defrayed by Paul V. and Gregory XV. Besides the Hebrew words in the Bible which are in the body of the book with the Latin version over against them, there are in the margin the differences between the Septuagint version and the Vulgate; so that at one view may be seen where the three Bibles agree and where they differ; and at the beginning of every article there is a kind of vocabulary, giving the signification of each Hebrew word, and affording an opportunity of comparing it with the Syriac, Arabic, and Chaldee. A new edition was published at London, 1747, 4 vol. folio, edited by Romaine; but it is not considered so accurate as the original edition, 1621.
